That Tired Feeling
Everybody knows what "that tired feeling" is. It afflicts the human family when the weather grows warmer in the spring, ... summer, just as Nature, refreshed from her long winter's rest, is preparing to display her self in all beauty and power. The contrast ... the condition of the body at that time ... every one feel ... tired, ... The reliable Spring medicine and blood purifier.
The children need the aid of a reliable Spring medicine as much as adults. The warm weather has upon them an equally depressing effect ... hard study at school ... nervous, cross, and fretful. Pimples or scrofulous humors ... adding disease ... Hood's Sarsaparilla ... toning up the body, and giving to the digestive organs healthy and regular action.

Strengthen the System
"I regard Hood's Sarsaparilla as the most reliable and best Spring medicine. I had tried ... without good results, until I ... convinced it was superior to all others. Every Spring I take three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and know nothing of that terrible languor so prevalent at that season of the year." MRS. J. M. CARTER, No. 26 Madison Street, Boston, Mass.
"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, and sharpens my appetite." W. J. BLAIR, Cortland, N. Y.
"Last Spring my two children were vaccinated. Soon after, they broke all out with running sores, so dreadful I thought I should lose them. Some one spoke to me about Hood's Sarsaparilla as a purifier of the blood. I bought a bottle and gave it to the children. Soon as they began to take it, they began to get better, till it cured them completely, and they have remained so ever since." MRS. C. L. THOMPSON, West Warren, Mass.
Mr. J. N. Ketchum, of Barre, Vt., says that his boy had several very ugly scrofulous sores on his leg. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Purify the Blood
"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for some time, and I have derived benefit therefrom. It gives me an appetite, and strengthens the system. I can cheerfully recommend it." ... JOSIAH W. COOK, Pres't Mutual Fire Ins. Co., Cambridge, Mass.
"I have made it a rule for years to take a Spring medicine to cleanse my blood, ... Last Spring Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me a good appetite, and seemed to build me over." J. M. HALL, Lima, Ohio.
"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me a great deal of good. I had no particular disease, but was tired out from overwork, and it toned me up." MRS. G. E. SIMMONS, Cohoes, N. Y.
"About a year ago I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was all run down, and no appetite, my food would not digest, and was troubled with nervous debility. On taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I commenced to feel the effects of it at once. Have now taken four bottles and can say I feel like a new man." J. H. McCALL, Rochester, N. Y.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

On Fast day the Androscoggin club won the championship badge in the shooting match in Deering, the Willard club coming out second. The Willards immediately challenged the Androscoggin club, and Wednesday the match took place in Lewiston. The Willard club did some excellent shooting, but the score of the Androscoggin club was slightly in advance. The Androscoggin scored 73 and the Willards 70.

Cumberland.

Articles were signed at Chicago, Monday, between John Teemer and Peter Conley, of Portland, for rowing a race of one and a half miles with turn at Pullman, May 30, for $1,000 a side.

The funeral of Mrs. William W. Thomas took place in Portland Tuesday afternoon. There was a large attendance of the old residents. Among those who were present to pay the last tribute of respect were ex-President Chamberlain of Bowdoin College, Rev. Mr. Daniels of the Second Parish, and Rev. Dr. Carruthers officiated, the latter dwelling upon the many virtues of the deceased in tender and affectionate terms. The music was very fine and many beautiful floral emblems—especially a superb crown from her son, Hon. W. W. Thomas—filled the rooms with their fragrance.

The Biddeford Journal says: Frank H. Deering, of South Gorham, was in town Monday. He has got a curiosity. It is a lamb. No, it is not a lamb, but a part of a lamb, because the animal is possessed of only two legs, and those are in front. The lamb never had any hind legs, and this lapsus naturae, as Worcester puts it, (Worcester also supplies high school graduating classes with mottoes) constitutes the curiosity. This lamb is three months old, takes its rations with the utmost regularity, and skips and hops about as lively as any in the flock.

Hancock.

A horse belonging to Mr. John Ashley, of Sullivan, not long ago reached his head over the fence into a hog yard. The hog therein did not reciprocate, but caught the horse by the side of the neck or throat, biting him severely, and inflicting a serious wound, from which he came near bleeding to death.

Mr. Henry Jellison, while at work recently in Hamor's mill, at Duck Brook, Eden, lost four fingers of one hand by contact with a circular saw.

Kennebec.

The annual statement of the standing and condition of the Waterville Savings Bank of Waterville shows the deposits to be $339,320.57; reserved fund, $15,800; profits, $10,274.54; estimated and market value of resources, $381,098.11; due depositors, including earned dividend and State tax, $345,515.57; surplus above all liabilities, $33,178.34. The rate of interest charged on loans is 5 to 7 per cent. Annual expenses, $1,800.

The graduating classes of Kent's Hill arranged to plant class trees on the campus, May-day. The public meetings of the term are to be held—The Adelphian the tenth week, May 16; Literati, the 11th; Calliopian, the 12th. A lecture was given Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Calliopian Society, by Rev. Henry Lummis of Stoneham, Mass. His subject was "How Little We Know," and abounded in illustrations from scientific experiments, which went to prove that man knows very little, but accepts on credit by belief what he thinks he knows. The Pine Tree Base Ball Association has organized by electing the following board of officers: W. F. Dunn, President; E. S. Merrill, vice president; L. E. Jones, secretary; Geo. Thompson, treasurer. They have four nines in practice with the following men on the first nine: Underwood, Cardwell, Snell, Wright, Fuller, Thompson, Sturtevant, Fogg and Dunn. There is to be a change in the time of the exercises commencement week. The class day exercises by the ladies of the college class, will occur Tuesday evening, prize reading and declamation in the forenoon, oration in the afternoon, and concert in the evening of Wednesday; commencement exercises, Thursday. The concert and music for the week is to be furnished by the music department. Prof. Morse already has the arrangements nearly completed, and without doubt it will be fine. There will be about twenty-five in the graduating classes, —seven from the ladies' college, thirteen from the scientific, five from the classical or college preparatory.

Oxford.

Mr. and Mrs. James Field, of West Sumner celebrated the fortieth anniversary of their wedding Saturday evening, April 26th, at their son's, Mr. H. W. Field, in Auburn, where they were greeted by children, grand-children, brothers, sisters, friends and neighbors.

Waldo.

Waldo County Council will meet with Farmers' Pride Grange, Lincolnville, on Tuesday May 6th.

While going to the funeral of Capt. Benj. Park, of Searsport, Sunday, Capt. J. G. Pendleton and A. B. Clements had their carriage capsized, and both were quite badly injured. Capt. Pendleton was severely cut about the head, and Mr. Clements was bruised badly. He was taken up for dead, but is now up and improving rapidly.

Capt. Samuel Matthews, who died in Searsport, Wednesday, April 23d, was a pensioner of the 1812 war and the oldest sea captain in town. He was born in the north part of Searsport, Jan. 20, 1792, and was consequently ninety-two years three months old. He could remember when there were but five houses in town and they were built of logs with birch bark for shingles. When with Capt. Clewley in schooner Despatch in the year 1814, bound to Boston with a load of wood, the schooner was taken by the English privateer, Young Shannon, about 7 miles off Cape Ann. Capt. Clewley and the crew were taken on board the Privateer, but Capt. Matthews was retained on board the Despatch to assist the English prize crew in taking her into a port in the Provinces. There was quite a quantity of rum on board, and one day when near Cape Sable all the Provincials got drunk, leaving Capt. Matthews in charge of the vessel. He ran ashore on the outer Island in Shag Harbor, four miles from Barrington, where he escaped and found friends who enabled him to Eastport, from whence he walked to Searsport in three days. He delighted in talking of the old days and had many interesting reminiscences of his early sailor and soldier life which it was a treat to hear told in his quaint and jovial way. He leaves a large number of relatives and hosts of friends who are consoled for their loss by the thought that he lived a long and well spent life and passed peacefully to rest.

The truth of this statement [illegible] cannot be denied, but it is rather rough on Mr. Morrison, particularly as it is one [illegible] opinion of the work of another.

As the Aroostook Times published the incorrect statement of the Portland Advertiser that Messrs. Edmunds's Speculations.

[New York Tribune.]

[illegible] Edmunds writes a letter to Mr. [illegible] nominally to correct some misstatement which he thinks Mr. Phelps has [illegible] about his railroad speculations, [illegible] and distinctly he admits every [illegible] thing Mr. Phelps said.

[illegible] Phelps, assailing nobody, but desiring a man unjustly assailed by Mr. Edmunds's friends, said that Mr. Edmunds, like Mr. Blaine, had bought an interest in a road he had voted in Congress [illegible]. Mr. Edmunds admits it. [illegible] Phelps said that Mr. Edmunds [illegible] this interest while he was [illegible] in [illegible]. Mr. Edmunds admits it. [illegible] Phelps said the interest Mr. Edmunds bought was "a block." Mr. Edmunds admits that it consisted of 295 [illegible] of the stock and 86,000 of the [illegible].

[illegible] Phelps said nothing more concerning Mr. Edmunds's relations to the road. [illegible] is entire reference to the subject.

"When I sat as a delegate-at-large in the [illegible] National Convention, Senator Edmunds [illegible] Senator Windom were both candidates [illegible] the Presidency, and I should gladly have supported either. Senator Edmunds is understood to have a block of Burlington and Missouri securities, and Senator Windom had not only a block in the securities of the Northern Pacific Company but was one of its directors. Yet you find no fault with those gentlemen. Nor would you and I differ in giving the highest rank [illegible] Senator Grimes, but both he and Senator Edmunds acquired their interests in the Burlington and Missouri road when they were in the Senate. They both supported the bill to restore the land grant to their road. It was passed on the same day with the Little Rock bill. Both measures were [illegible], and both were passed in the House [illegible] Senate without a dissenting vote. Why must we suspect that Mr. Blaine had a secret and corrupt motive and that other members and Senators had none?"

Mr. Edmunds admits every word of this relating to himself. We print his letter and Mr. Phelp's rejoiner elsewhere; and they will be found an amusing study, for those who have been watching the virtuous contortions of Mr. Edmund's friends over the wickedness of Mr. Blaine in doing the exact thing which Mr. Edmunds now admits that he did, under the same circumstances and at the same time.

Mr. Edmunds' real cause of complaint is not against Mr. Phelps, who stated the facts exactly as Mr. Edmunds now states them, but against us. We stated that he differed from Mr. Blaine, in actually owning this interest in the road when he voted to restore its land grant. We hasten to accept Mr. Edmunds' denial; and to explain on his authority that he did not differ from Mr. Blaine even in this particular. He did precisely and exactly what Mr. Blaine did—no more and no less. He voted, as Mr. Blaine ruled, to restore a land grant. Three months later, like Mr. Blaine, he took an interest in the road. We have never censured Mr. Blaine for it, and we do not censure Mr. Edmunds. But, on Mr. Edmunds' own statement, we do not see how an honest man can censure the one without censuring the other.

Mr. Blaine's investment has been the subject of investigations, discussion and unending criticism. Mr. Edmunds's has been so sedulously concealed that the mere mention of it in print sent a cold shiver through all Bridgewater Reformerdom. Yet the fact of the later investment has been well enough known for years in some circles in Washington, and the current talk was, that it stood in the name of a friend or trustee till—months after the vote—Mr. Edmunds thought proper to take it. Without question, we accept his statement as prima facie evidence that we were wrong in believing and repeating this part of the story.

The rest of it—the portion which makes the action of Mr. Edmunds the precise counterpart of Mr. Blaine's—Mr. Edmunds admits, and we are glad on all accounts that the parallel is exact. We make this our best apologies for having, on inadequate authority, accepted the report that he went further than Mr. Blaine. We hasten to give his statement that he went just as far as Mr. Blaine and no further;—made exactly the same sort of investment, after the same sort of action in Congress, within the same interval of time; and on the same terms.

"The Ethical Aspects of the Protective System"

[Boston Journal, March 28.]

Professor Sumner is a leader in that school of political economy which maintains that it is "a science based upon assumptions," and he himself protests against "the heaping together of statistics, historical facts and authorities in economical discussions." If he had never made this declaration until after his assumption that the annual profits of the Willimantic Thread Company were somewhere in the vicinity of 90 per cent., an assumption which was disproved by facts and figures, he might have been excused for his hostility to the introduction of facts and history into economic discussion. In that contest the champion of pure dialectics was overthrown by a bookkeeper, and we have yet to learn that Professor Sumner has ever admitted that his statement relative to the profits of the company referred to was without foundation. This is doubtless due to the fact that he still believes that his assumption in regard to the matter is more authoritative than the financial statement of the corporation and the testimony of its stockholders.

Saturday evening Professor Sumner read a paper on "The Ethical Aspects of the Protective System" before the Liberal Union Club. As no statistics could be "heaped together" and none of the facts which are so conclusive to the average man could be hurled against him, Professor Sumner had a clear field for speculation and assumption. Assuming that the protective tariff benefits chiefly the capitalists whose money is invested in a protected industry, the Professor had no trouble in showing that the protective system is unjust, morally wrong and demoralizing. And it is probable that many admirers will become to the conclusion that a protective tariff is only another name for robbery, and that the free trade paper which denounces New England manufacturers as "robber-barons" was not far out of the way. The difficulty with the Professor's theory is that his premise is an assumption and the assumption is false. The capitalists who are interested in a protected industry are not the only persons benefited by the system. On the contrary, whole communities and the entire Nation receive the benefits of the system directly or indirectly.

This is not an assumption, but a statement which is warranted by an investigation of statistics and historical facts. By the inductive system of investigating the results of protection by "the heaping together of statistics, historical facts and authorities," it has been proved time and again that nearly all the inhabitants of a country having a protective tariff, except those who have fixed incomes not dependent upon industries of any kind, are benefited by an intelligent system of protection. This class is not yet very numerous in this country, and as Professor Sumner holds to the doctrine of "the survival of the strongest" in the industrial and commercial world, the small number of people with fixed incomes must be content to yield to that policy which really affords the greatest good to the greatest number. If they are not willing to do this they can find those who will take their fixed incomes and give present holders their places with the majority in exchange.

As usual with all assumptions those of Prof. Sumner are full of fallacies. For instance, he reiterates the assumption that "if New England industries depend on tariff, and would not exist but for the tariff, then New England is a 'pensioner' on the rest of the country." If our Lowells, Lawrences and thriving manufacturing villages, he says, cannot exist without a protective tariff on their products, then these towns are living upon forced contributions." These assumptions and conclusions have been exploded time and again, and yet the Yale professor announced them as if they were fresh. The farmers—not only in New England but in the West—know that the towns which have grown up by protected industries are the consumers upon whom they must depend for a market. They sell the people in these towns and the populations dependent upon them $15 worth of their products where they sell these in other countries, one dollar's worth. We are aware that the Sumner school will reply that if they did not sell their produce to those employed in the manufacturing and mechanical industries at home they would find a market abroad.

This is another assumption. England and France require a given amount of food from abroad under ordinary circumstances, and no more. If those engaged in manufactures and the industries depending on them should cease to manufacture because Professor Sumner says that it is morally wrong for them to go [illegible] if they cannot go on without a protective tariff, and should, as they must, turn to agriculture, what would be the result? Simply that nearly three millions of people employed in manufactures and [illegible] million in round numbers depending upon manufactures would be forced into agriculture or the production of raw materials. What would be the effect of that? Wheat, corn, cotton, cattle and hogs would have no price, so great would be the surplus of producers and so restricted would be the market. Under the present conditions so much wheat has been raised the past two years that the price has fallen, say, 20 per cent. What would be the result if fifteen millions of people depending upon the protected industries in this country were forced to go to raising food? Now, these people are living in a degree of comfort far above that of those engaged in the same industries in any part of the world—would it involve no injustice and no wrong to introduce a system which will put them on a lower plane of existence simply that a limited number of people with fixed incomes may purchase some of the products of the factory and the workshop at a lower price?

There is another consideration. The foreign manufacturer is constantly predicting that if the protective tariff were got rid of he could close the factories of his competitors in this country in less than a year. That was the avowed British policy a few years ago. Now, if the leading manufacturing industries in this country could be crippled, is it probable that the goods now protected would be as cheap as they are under protection? Suppose, because it costs twice as few cents to make a yard of woolen goods in the United States, every mill should stop in obedience with the teachings of Professor Sumner would the consumer be able to purchase his coat at as low a figure as at the present time? The lessons of experience are that they would soon be higher, and the country whose labor is cheap, capital abundant and taxes low, would so manipulate the prices that there could be little competition in this country without the barrier of a protective tariff. Would the morals of commerce be improved and would there be full justice to all if that Nation which has the mighty because of its own exertions in the past, should be permitted to dictate the markets of the world simply because it is in position to do so?

Professor Sumner never gets beyond the consumer. He assumes that every man has the means with which to purchase, and consequently has the right to buy where he can buy cheapest. Doubtless most of the people with whom he associates are not of that vast majority who live by daily toil. If his policy is carried out, if all the industries in America should cease with benumbing [illegible] the combination of foreign competitors to crush them out, if no tariff intervenes, what will all these millions now employed have to buy with? They have no fixed incomes. They have no large reserve of wealth. Their all is in their skill and their hands. If there is no justification in denying them of the means of existence. And moreover, is it not possible that the limited class who enjoy fixed incomes might suffer if all these industries should cease to exist which hold protection?

"Did it ever occur to the Sumner school how much the value of real estate and rent its [illegible] of stocks and the bonds would be affected by these industries going to the wall with the [illegible] protection? Who [illegible] would [illegible] in many blocks in Boston now [illegible] a good income if Professor Sumner's ethical teachings should be adopted and the banks would be compelled to go into liquidation should New England's great industries be crippled. The people having fixed incomes would be among the first to feel the disastrous consequences if Professor Sumner's [illegible] of the [illegible] should be based upon them. Indeed it is probable that the incomes of our famous institutions of learning, now endowed very liberally, by men who have made money under the protective system, might so fall off as to affect the salaries of those who denounce protection as robbery.

In these [illegible] Mr. Eaton has been cited as Democratic authority on constitutional questions so that his attack on the Morrison bill on constitutional grounds will be a difficult matter for the Democrats to get round. He [illegible] the section of the Constitution which gives Congress the power to levy duties for the general welfare. "What is the general welfare?" said he. "New England pays the Southern States every year eighty million dollars for cotton and pays the Western States fifty million dollars for breadstuffs. Is it not for the general welfare that this New England market should not be lost, or that the South and West [illegible] upon the mercy of a foreign market?" He then read from the Constitution of the late so-called Confederate States the provision which prohibited [illegible] the statement that no taxes shall be imposed to promote or foster any industry. "It seems to me," exclaimed Mr. Eaton, "that some of my friends are acting under this Constitution and that they imagine themselves to be sitting in Richmond instead of Washington. Their arguments fit the Confederate Constitution, but not the Constitution of our country."

The campaign for the delegations to the National Convention, says the Lewiston Journal, has now practically closed and Mr. Blaine counts 368 delegates—gaining 3 in Massachusetts and 7 in Maryland more than on Wednesday were claimed by his friends. This brings the "Plumed Knight" within 43 votes of a nomination on the first ballot, and indicates how much stronger Mr. Blaine is now than in the preliminary contest of four years ago, when on the first ballot he fell 107 votes short of a nomination. Only the most irrational fear of all the other candidates and delegates can defeat Mr. Blaine's nomination. It is believed that Mr Logan will control votes enough to nominate Mr Blaine, and that he will be disposed to withdraw early in the contest. The squinting toward the dark horse is noticeably diminishing, as the date of the assembling of the Convention—four weeks from next Tuesday—draws near.

The speech of Mr. Eaton, the Democratic Representative from Connecticut, was a hot shot in the camp of the free traders. Speaker Carlisle's private secretary, the Washington correspondent of the Boston Post, says it was a "rambling performance full of malignity and disorder," and then proceeds to read the gentleman out of the Democratic party. Mr. Eaton, however, will probably decline to take his marching orders from either Speaker Carlisle or his secretary. He said he had done his best to defeat the consideration of the Morrison bill and would continue to do all he could to defeat it now, and the indications are that the motion to strike out the enacting clause will be carried by a small majority.

THE

Henry F. Miller

PIANOS

The most successful Piano for the past twenty years. [Musical Courier.]

New York, March 8th, 1884.

Within a few weeks the most accomplished amateur pianiste in Boston, the daughter of the Chief Magistrate of the State, a lady of recognized judgment, who cannot be influenced, determined to change one of her several grand pianos (a Chickering, which she had been using for some time,) and her inclination was to exchange it for a new one of the same manufacture. The grand piano she examined did not satisfy her demands as an artist, and she visited the warerooms of Henry F. Miller, where she at once found a grand piano that combined all the qualities—tone, touch, singing quality, power, etc., which are necessary in a high grade instrument, and she purchased it in exchange for the Chickering Grand.

This is not an isolated case. In fact it looms up as one of the few extraordinary cases, where independent judgment is enabled to exercise its complete sway, and it forcibly points out the tendency of events. The Millers are aiming at an artistic elevation. Every instrument is of the highest grade of workmanship is solicited. Elegant catalogue will be sent on application.

IT IS ABOUT TIME

For the annual copying fiend to be abroad in the land, with a finely touched up picture as a sample, but when your picture returns it don't pan out anywhere near as you expected, but there seems to be no other resource than to take it; as the original will not be surrendered until the price is paid. Now I wish to sharply outline a fact that is not generally known, that I make a specialty of copying of every description. Mark well the words—of EVERY DESCRIPTION—and can furnish pictures much better and cheaper than any agent can or will, do and if not satisfactory will be made so in every respect.

TESTIMONIALS AND MERIT.

Less than three months ago,

BELL'S SARSAPARILLA

was first brought to public notice. It has been advertised only in a limited way, yet the sale in that time has reached to nearly and is constantly increasing. This great demand has come for the following reasons: Those who have tried the medicine have not been disappointed. No other preparation ever offered here has been so publicly endorsed as a Blood and Liver medicine, on merit over their own signatures, by well-known citizens as BELL'S SARSAPARILLA; the production of a remedy of the size and value of BELL'S SARSAPARILLA, at 50 cents per bottle, while all others are sold for $1.00, is a new idea, that has proved a successful one. From every town where it has been introduced, comes the same response. "It is the best and most popular selling spring medicine we [illegible]."

The following from WM. E. MANN & CO. is but a sample of the whole:

To A. M. Robinson, Jr.—Our retail trade for Bell's Sarsaparilla exceeds any other patent medicine with the exception of Warner's Safe Cure, and our jobbing trade in it is very good indeed.

To Any One in Bangor in POOR HEALTH,

PROVIDENCE, May 2. James Lynch, a young Irish carpenter, of Newport, who has been in this country but a few months, has come into a fortune of 20,000 pounds, bequeathed by a distant relative in the west of Ireland and he has left Newport for New York on his return to Ireland.

FORTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS—First Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 2. The Chair laid before the Senate a telegraphic message from Mr Wicker, late Collector of Customs at Key West, Fla., asking that a full investigation may be made in connection with his official duties.

Mr Garland reported adversely the House bill requiring Governors of territories to be for two years residents of the territories in which they may be appointed

Mr. Cullom, from the Committee on Territories, reported adversely a memorial and joint resolution from the Wyoming legislature asking for additional compensation The report was agreed to

Consideration of the shipping bill was resumed and Mr. Vest made a formal offer of an amendment permitting the admission to American registry of ships bought abroad and the admission free of duty of shipbuilding materials

Mr McPherson offered an amendment to it excluding ships bought abroad from coastwise trade

Mr. Hale spoke in support of the bill and in opposition to the amendment of Mr Vest. He agreed with that gentleman that no act of Congress would bring the carrying trade immediately back to its original condition, but what there was left of it would be promptly annihilated by the adoption of Mr Vest's amendment If free trade should get possession of the Senate Mr. Hale continued, as it had got possession of the House, we may bid farewell to all hope of seeing a revival of American mercantile marine in our life time

Mr Hale in conclusion remarked that nothing tended so much to keep the peace of Europe as the sensitive condition of English shipping but if war should break out between England and any other European power, the whole sailing force of Great Britain would, if Mr Vest's amendment should prevail, come under the American flag in the name of some part ner of the act, or factor of the American Nation, and we should present to the world the spectacle of a great Nation having the carrying trade under our flag without our people realizing a dollar from it Such a condition of affairs would, in Mr Hale's opinion, be intolerable to American people

Pending debate the Senate went into Executive session and when the doors reopened, adjourned to Monday

House

The House went into Committee on the tariff bill

Mr Nutting, of New York, opposed the bill

Mr Deuster, of Wisconsin, gave notice of an amendment which he proposed to offer, providing that on and after July first no duty shall be levied or collected on any kind of [illegible] which may in any manner be consumed by the people or by factories of the United States

Mr Hardbout, of New York, favored the bill He said the Democratic House was undertaking to carry out by legislation what the administration of President Arthur was doing through the use of the treaty making power, and cited the reciprocal treaty with Mexico and that foreshadowed with Spain and Cuba as examples, claiming both political parties were being compelled to the same course by the demands of the country for free commerce and foreign markets

Mr Cox, of North Carolina, regretted the tone of the speech made yesterday by Mr Eaton of Connecticut, who, in order to secure the applause of the Republican side and to draw odium on the measure which his party was advocating, had appealed to sectional prejudice He then proceeded to answer the protection arguments asserting that protection for the sake of protection was robbery

Mr Cox, of New York, briefly replied to some propositions advanced by Mr Kelley of Pennsylvania One of Mr Kelley's propositions was that the cheapening of goods which involved a reduction of wages, could not relieve any stigma at American industry This assumed that the cheapening of our products of manufactures must result in the reduction of wages and this assumption Mr Cox controverted The wages depended on the supply of labor and on the skill of labor ers

Mr Hoblitzell of Maryland, deprecated any agitation of the tariff question at this time The present system was full of incongruities inequalities and anomalies but the pending bill would have the effect of making the inflations system more incongruous more unequal and more anomalous

Mr Springer, of Illinois, said the pending bill did no more than what had been recommended by the tariff commission It went no further than the commission had said was demanded by the best interests of the country and certainly the Democratic Congress would not hesitate to enact such a measure as this and bring some relief to the people

Messrs Brumm and Brown of Pennsylvania, briefly opposed the bill and the committee then rose and the House took a recess till 8 p. m., the evening session to be for consideration of pension bills

THE BRIDGES The bridges which were affected by the recent flood on the Kenduskeag are now all receiving attention A crew of men under the charge of W & L Sutter, are busily engaged on Kenduskeag Bridge and it will not be many days before a temporary structure will be completed so that this important thoroughfare can be open to travel The repairs on Franklin street bridge are being done under the supervision of [illegible] B Brown and are about finished The temporary log bridge proposed at Morse's Mills is being built under the direction of G W Munster

AN INTERESTING FEATURE [illegible] H Hill, Jr, General Manager of the [illegible] & P S S Co, is about effecting arrangements for music on the line for the coming season of summer travel, and expects to [illegible] a full brass and string band on the steamer Mount Desert on her daily trips between Rockland and Mt Desert Also a band for each steamer out of Boston, which will play at the wharf upon departure and during the sail down Boston Harbor and later give a grand concert in the saloon between 7½ and 9 o'clock in the evening Returning from the east at Rockland and during the sail past Owl's Head and down the bay a choice programme will be performed, and in the evening a grand concert will be given

MEMORIAL DAY Frank [illegible] Merrill, Commander in Chief of the Sons of Veterans, U S A, has issued an order in regard to the observance of Memorial Day The different Commanderies are requested to tender their services to the different Grand Army Posts to which they are attached for the purpose of aiding them in performing this solemn duty In his circular Commander Merrill says The time is not far distant when the duty will devolve wholly upon us, it is well therefore that we learn from our fathers the significance of this annual floral offering, to the end that we may be better fitted to carry on the work when they are mustered out of service It is expected that all brothers will consider it not only a duty but a privilege to assist in this ceremony

OLDTOWN. Some correspondence received by us from Oldtown has necessarily been deferred, owing to the crowded nature of our columns, during the past few days A temperance literary entertainment was given under the auspices of the W C T U, of Oldtown and Milford, the other evening in the Congregational vestry, with marked success Several ladies of the community read well selected articles with telling effect The Congregational pastor giving an object lesson and the Baptist pastor a chalk talk. The Principal of the High School, in well chosen words, spoke of the lack of sympathy between the school and the saloon, and while he could wish that the school might take the place of every rum shop he did not wish to see the school take the place of the school The singing, under the skillful and gifted leader, sustained by fine talent, added much to the inspiration and cheer of the hour A reed organ [illegible] and blind song by two little ones were among the most pleasing features of the evening We sincerely hope this may be only the initial step to many more entertainments of a similar character

PATTEN ITEMS Our Patten correspondent writes Lieutenant Howe the temperance worker, has been in Patten the past week lecturing His first evening was devoted to a lecture on our late civil war, entitled "From [illegible] 1861 to 1865, and at the close, a petition blank was presented by the speaker and signatures for a Grand Army Post in Patten solicited In a short space of time the required number of names were secured and it is expected that a Grand Army Post will be organized here at no distant date Lieut Howe, as a reformed man is deeply in earnest in the temperance cause and moved the masses as only a reformed drinker who has felt the worst effects of the evil can For eight evenings Mr Howe held crowded houses spellbound with his eloquent appeals and nearly 300 names were added to the pledge at these meetings and a Reform Club was organized with the following officers Capt C Perry, President, Zenas [illegible] Littlefield 1st Vice President Charles B Taylor, 2d Vice President, Samuel Briggs Secretary C R Brown Treasurer, and J B Rogers Chaplain, Patten Reform Club meets every Sabbath afternoon at 2 30 o'clock in the Congregational church. Lieutenant Howe commenced work at Sherman on the evening of the 30th, speaking as usual to a crowded house — Patten Academy closed its spring term May 1st Mr Byron of Auburn taught this term and the winter term — The Odd Fellows of Patten and the citizens of School District No 2, are talking of building a school house and Odd Fellows hall under one roof at no distant day — The tramps are prevailing just now

AMUSEMENTS

The Shaughraun

The interesting Irish drama, "The Shaughraun" was played in the Opera House last evening by members of the Grattan Literary Association of Portland The piece is quite a heavy one for amateurs to present, but they were fully equal to the task and the entertainment gave marked satisfaction, the participants being received with warm applause The title role was assumed by Mr McCallum in admirable style and it is evident that a bright future is before him on the stage The songs by Miss Flaherty were a very pleasing feature of the evening The lady possesses a fine voice and her rendition of "Kathleen Mavourneen" was charming The various members of the company generally acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner and the trip of the Grattans to our city will be remembered with pleasure

Last evening was quite a gala occasion at the skating rink and old Norombega contained a large throng The polo contest between the Bangor and Oldtown teams was won by the former in three straight heats. The game was finely fought and the home club demonstrated that they can not be easily vanquished Capt. Parker won the goal for the Bangors [illegible] The game was watched with interest by the crowd and applause was freely given Later in the evening Prof. G. H. Perry, of Oldtown, gave an excellent exhibition in fancy skating and with Master Alfred Gouyer of the same, place, went through some highly difficult movements amid warm applause, Master Dana [illegible]

Brown, of this city, also favored the audience with an interesting exhibition.

Across the Continent.

For fourteen years Oliver Doud Byron's well known sensational drama "Across the Continent," has maintained its hold upon popular favor It will be given at the Opera House next Monday evening, and the sale of seats opened yesterday morning Mr. Byron invests the role of "Joe Ferris" with a great deal of dash and earnestness, and is supported by Miss Kate Byron and a good company The play is replete with startling effects and incidents —rolling trains telegraphing practical operation Indians hand-to-hand combats, and other devices to electrify the nervous system

John L. Stoddard

The opening lecture by John L Stoddard at the Opera House on Tuesday evening next promises to be one of the finest he has ever delivered Its title is "The Castle Bordered Rhine" and in it the gifted speaker and traveller seeks to give his impressions of a journey down its full now by carriage road along the banks of this famous river, and now by vessel on its bosom, traversing the entire distance from source to mouth All the historic and important towns and all the noted castles and ruins on the shores are visited and everything made real and vivid by magnificent illustrations Single tickets for the first lecture are now on sale

Notes

There is some prospect of a season of English Opera at the Opera House this spring by a strong company

Efforts are being made to arrange dates at the Opera House this month for the famous melodrama, The Romany Rye

On the River

[illegible]

... old tricks again! If I were (his) father or brother I should (take) (it) (upon) (myself) to express my opinion (pretty) strongly. ... Miss Elliot ... I have noticed ... the ... half the evening ... judge from the lady's ... attentions are not otherwise ...

[illegible]

... hardly like you to honor an evening rout when there is no dancing—unless some special attraction tempted you?"

"And how could that be when you were at Twickenham?"

"Well put, my friend, but hardly so gracefully expressed as I should have expected from you. Queenie, darling, run in and ask why they don't bring tea."

"Here it comes—and—confound it! another visitor. Why cannot that butler of yours learn discretion?"

"Because I prefer to exercise my own," replies Mrs. Fairfax. And the little baby face takes an expression for a moment which warns Vane he has gone too far.

"Who would have thought," he murmurs into his beard, "that that little pussy cat could show such claws."

Meanwhile Mrs. Fairfax has risen and moved forward to receive her new guest. The servant mumbles a name which she does not catch, and she lifts her pretty appealing eyes in some perplexity to the stranger's face.

Something she reads in that grave bronzed countenance that brings back old memories—recalling a time long passed away before poor Jack Fairfax won her with his fiery impetuous suit of love—before she had, as it were, crept suddenly from childhood into the glare and excitement of a spoiled beauty's life. ... dream ... when the visitor speaks—unconsciously softening his deep tones with the gentleness he would have used to address a child.

"You have forgotten me, Mrs. Fairfax? I do not wonder—it is years since we met—and—"

"No, no!" she suddenly cried, with a joyous clasp of her hands. "You are Captain Grahame—my playfellow of long ago. I remember you quite well now; but so much has happened since those days——"

"I know," he answers gently, wondering whether the shadow in her blue eyes is caused by Jack's memory, or—as he looks at the handsome young fellow so evidently at home in this garden—by Jack's chosen successor. And then they ... the fashion common to Englishmen when they meet for the first time ... whether to be on friendly terms or fly at each other's throats.

"Sir Reginald Van ... Colonel, surely? I thought so!—Colonel Grahame." And while ... still bow is exchanged, she proceeds to pour out the tea.

Vane ... his attention to Queenie, but she ... from some perverse instinct of coquetry, bestows all her favors upon the colonel, whose grave aspect ... prove attractive to children ... into a kindly smile as little one on his knee ... her face to that of the mother ... by some few years ... when Nina Forrest ... on the knee of the shy young cornet.

II

"... will let me scull you up the river, Mrs. Fairfax," says Vane, as he puts down his teacup. "I have not forgotten ... there his voice takes a more tender inflection ... our last expedition to Hampton Court."

Mrs. Fairfax looks doubtfully towards her other guest, who soon ... serves. "... don't let me be ... your plans! Or perhaps—you will allow me to take an oar in your service."

Nina's face darkens, but the widow claps her hands and answers gayly: "Capital! It would really have been hard work for one alone in this heat."

So Queenie runs to fetch her mother's hat ... last moment finds the charms of a favorite kitten's society irresistible, and elects to remain on terra firma herself.

Vane pulls stroke, and the boat glides smoothly away from the emerald ... and out into the glassy expanse of water ... others gayly laden with a similar freight, and looking as if playing their part in some holiday show.

"This has been very hard on me," murmurs Vane, bending forward so that his words are audible to the fair steerer only. "My pleasant afternoon all spoiled! Eclipse——"

"Because you are a foolish, self-willed boy," answers the little woman, who, although some four years his junior, sometimes likes to play the maternal. "Besides ... shake off your ... less ... agreeable ... dine with us."

"With us! Are you going to invite that fellow too?"

"Certainly I am. He is one of my very oldest friends." ("Old enough!" grumbles Vane.) "And I have not seen him for years. We have heaps of things to say to one another."

"Then you will certainly get through them better uninterrupted," says Sir Reginald in a spiteful sotto voce. Then aloud: "I am awfully sorry, Mrs. Fairfax, but I have just remembered that I have to dine out to-night. I am afraid I must ask you to land me at Surbiton, so that I can get home by train. Steer more to the right, please, you are running us into that barge."

"Why! are you growing nervous?" and again that sweet clear voice rings out, and Vane grinds his teeth as he feels rather than sees that a grim smile is overspreading the face behind him.

When Surbiton is reached at length, he scarcely attempts to disguise his relief as he springs ashore.

"Good-bye. Many thanks, Mrs. Fairfax. ... come over again soon?"

"If you like—only it is best to give me notice beforehand, as I might be in London ... But, yes," softening ... "come when you like. Any day this week."

... heavy moist ... puffs ... this ... unusual ... both oars. As with a few vigorous strokes the boat ... motion, the widow's eye for the first time lights upon the maimed left hand, and she exclaims in dismay:

"Why —how—did that happen?"

"In South Africa—long ago. Don't be afraid! My sculling may be somewhat clumsy, but I will promise to get you safe home in due course of time."

"Oh, I was not thinking of myself. But does it not hurt you? I am so sorry I did not know before Sir Reginald left us. Or ... could I help you, I wonder?"

"With those tiny baby hands of yours? No, no! I am getting on perfectly well, but give that steam launch more space or we shall get a tossing after she has passed."

A silence follows, during which both are busy with their own reflections. When Mrs. Fairfax lifts her eyes to her companion's face it is so grave that she exclaims, in wonder:

"I was going to say, 'A penny for your thoughts,' but from the expression of your countenance yours must be weighty enough to be worth much more. Won't you be generous and impart them gratis?"

A long pause, during which she leans over the side of the boat and idly dabbles one hand in the water.

"Take care!" he says, warningly, "you will lose your rings."

"I have none on that hand, except—" She takes the little white fingers out of the water, and gazes half sadly on the thick gold band—Jack's wedding-ring—placed there six years ago, and only eighteen months before Jack's own honest heart was still and cold.

Leslie Grahame is looking at it also, and somehow the sight nerves him to the next words he has to say:

"It is a long time since we met, is it not? I was with poor Jack when he bought that ring, and a few days later we had orders for India, and so I missed the wedding. But I did not forget my old friend or his bride—nor," he adds, more gently, "did I forget you when sudden news reached me. Poor Jack!" he says, dreamily, his thoughts busy with the boy friend of his youth, and in a manner forgetting that he is speaking to that friend's widow. "So young, so open hearted and generous"—

"All that and more," she said, quickly, "he was too good for this cold, hard world. Ah me! to think that Jack, who was so strong, should have been taken, and little me left to face life alone!"

"You have your child." Unconsciously his tone has grown a little stern again.

"Darling Queenie! Yes. But it is dull sometimes, and one wants some one to consult, to lean on."

"And you think to find that some one in Reginald Vane!"

He is sorry next moment to have blurted out the words, but it is too late to recall them. She flashes a glance at him, and he meets it steadily, expecting to be assailed with a torrent of feminine wrath, but is taken aback at receiving instead a sudden burst of tears.

"Mrs. Fairfax—what a brute I am! forgive me! I have lived so much alone that I have fallen into a dreadful habit of speaking my thoughts aloud."

"But how come you to have such thoughts?"

"Could I help it? Only last night I heard your names coupled together by the voice of common gossip, and to-day have I not seen some confirmation of the report? And I would not presume to find fault, though I was once not only Jack's friend but almost a rough elder brother to you in the days of long ago."

"Not forgotten," murmurs a stifled voice, "only I wondered why you never came to see me."

"It was best not. —— Jack loved and trusted me—his mentor as he used to call me, poor boy! But now—now, Nina, I cannot but think of the old days when I see you about to take an irretrievable step with one whom I cannot think worthy——"

"You are jealous," our grave colonel actually condescending to such a weakness! And pray may I ask, what makes you think Sir Reginald is unworthy—I don't say of little me—but of any good thing the world can bestow?"

"His dishonorable conduct toward another woman. Forgive me, Nina—Heaven knows I would sooner bite my tongue out than say it—but he is playing a double part in this making up to you for your fortune, while all his heart—what is left to give—belongs to Miss Elliot. I saw him by her side last night. I watched the looks and signs that passed between them, and I speak solemn truth when I say that I believe he has won the poor girl's affections, and that, in sober earnest, he cares for her. And now that I have said my say, and brought a cloud over the face I have always connected with ... smile, I will go my way, only asking that ... here you will think a little kindly of me. Here is your landing place."

As he pulls the boat into the tiny creek ... resting on his oars, waits for her to spring ashore and give him his hand, gesture of dismissal. But Nina does not move. Her head is bent down, and she ... overshadowed ... hat ... the ... of the faintly flushed face.

It seems ages to him before the silence is broken. "And that—did you always think me a dreadful flirt?"

He is startled and taken unawares by the appealing tones. How would he answer ... reassuring ... memories of the old days ... swept like ... illusions of the sweet little ... suddenly into an exacting ... woman... poor Jack's ... the days of his brief ... ill-considered ... and ... truth ... compels him to answer.

"I don't think you could help it—some women are formed to be the torment of every man who comes near them—it is your nature to be sweet and lovable. And now I being an older and I did—and ... only for admiration, so that I could stoop to look up ... that belongs of right to another woman. Oh, I ... you thought this."

By Heaven, I did you injustice," cries the colonel, in a burst of self-reproach. "I've been insulting you all this time ... as I ... used in the old days when I was a big unmannerly boy and tyrannized over you like the ... I was."

"And I liked you through it all. This ... spoiled every pretty ... "

"Nina, Nina, do not drive me mad. ... Tell me ... years ago because I knew you ... Jack."

"You did?"

"Was I not right? You would never have chosen me—the grave stern soldier—when, after ... years ... in preference to that bright sunny-hearted ... And now! don't think, dear, that I have gone back to ... you. I would have seen you to-day but that I could not bear to leave you unwarned of the gossip afloat. But now that you ... woman's wit and your own ... heart will prove your best defence. ... Nina, say ... to ... gave ... as you used to ... go."

Leslie!

It is well that the drooping branches of a weeping willow have made a leafy secluded bower of the landing place, well, too, that the garden ... coming down to ... the boat. ... sooner or his ... eyes might have seen what Queenie afterward ... reports ... crying ... comforting her as mamma does me when I tumble down, holding her head on his shoulder and stroking her hair.

For Leslie Grahame's long hopeless tale of love had been spoken at last, and the little playfellow of early days—the prize which he gave up in bitter self-doubt to his boy friend—his wild ... the ... "Yes" which had ... been ... slighted, might have been spoken long ago if I have—paid him ... of self-inflicted exile.—The Argosy.

BOSTON, October 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1840, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, reissues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business in your line and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly,
